THE ELECTION.

Our Defeat, The Cause and Future.

The Liberal party is routed and whipped in the full sense of the term and Gen. Grant is elected by a triumphant and overwhelming majority. This result we have been fully prepared for since the October elections, and the general lack of interest displayed by our friends in all the States show that the whole party were prepared for and expecting defeat. Not a single Northern State has gone for Greeley and the few States pulled through for him was, so to speak, under lash and spur.

The Radicals have carried New York by probably forty thousand; Indiana by ten; Pennsylvania by an overwhelming vote; Vermont by over thirty thousand; Wisconsin by fifteen; Massachusetts by over sixty; Michigan about thirty; Minnesota twenty; New Jersey five; Rhode Island eight; Iowa thirty; Kansas fifteen; Connecticut four; New Hampshire two; Delaware two; Maine, California, Ohio, Illinois, Mississippi, South Carolina, West Virginia and North Carolina, by large majorities.

Greeley has carried Kentucky by about ten thousand, Georgia thirty, Tennessee twenty, Louisiana fifteen, Maryland seven, Virginia five, Texas twenty, and possibly Missouri, Arkansas, Alabama and Florida by small majorities.

The result is passed, and we have got to abide another four years of Red rule; and then, God only knows what will be next.

When the Liberals met in convention at Cincinnati in May last, there was unquestionably a very loud demand for a change of Administration, but the efforts to unite the dissatisfied elements was a series of blunders from the beginning to the end. The Liberal Republicans failed to coalesce themselves, the President of their convention belittled his own nomination and platform; Mr. Schurz, Sumner, and other great Liberal leaders, were staggered at their own work, and halted in their acceptance of Greeley; and when they did take the field for him popular enthusiasm had been blunted. The Democratic party was expected to receive with enthusiasm the work of the Cincinnati Liberals when many of the Liberals themselves rejected it. The result proves that the Northern Democracy refused to come to it with their old time vigor and strength, and hence not a Northern State embraced the Greeley banner. Some are quick to say that the refusal of the North to Democracy to support Greeley reflected Grant's re-election, and it is perhaps measurably true, but the cause is better described in the general refusal of the opponents of Radicalism to combine into one solid organization. The Democracy do what they would could do nothing to exactly suit certain Liberals, and the Liberals could set no way to please certain Democrats. Therefore, neither party rallied to the Greeley standard with any warmth or enthusiasm. The nomination of Greeley was a mistake, in that it failed to unite the opponents of Radicalism, and we doubt if any man could have been nominated who could have centered all this strength. All of which proves that the country is not yet ready for the principles of Liberalism—the Northern mind is yet fired with enthusiasm for their great military chieftain, and are not willing to shake hands across the bloody chasm of our civil war.

The supporters of Mr. Greeley may reflect with pride upon their action. He has borne himself throughout the campaign as a great leader, worthy of the great cause which he represented. The people of the South accepted his nomination with somewhat of fear and trembling, but his campaign speeches assured them that he had the power, the brain and the soul, to do every thing possible for any leader to do. We are convinced that his nomination was a mistake; but we are proud to have supported Greeley and proud that the Southern Democracy, through him, expressed unmistakably their Liberal sentiments. We believe now, that if Hendricks had been the nominee, though doomed to certain defeat, that he would have left party organization in better condition, and with more strength to resist Radicalism in the councils of the nation. This is passed, however, and can't be remedied. Our leaders made the mistake—we thought they were right at the time, because we thought they could better survey the field than we—and we yet believe they were deceived by noble and patriotic purposes. Therefore, without criminal recrimination, let us stand together as a noble minority, proud of having fought, though lost, a glorious battle; with the best of intentions to cheer unflinchingly in the future for the old landmarks.

Our suspicions with regard to the probable future policy of Grant toward Cuba are being confirmed sooner than we had expected. It seems that the President and his advisers are already discounting the future, and preparing to make cheap popularity. It is a master of common report in Washington that Grant will urge Congress in his forthcoming message to take immediate action upon the Cuba question, and some even go so far as to assert that he will take the responsibility himself and issue a proclamation recognizing the insurgents as belligerents. In case this course is determined upon, there is no doubt that the filibustering element in this country will be daily advised, and that they will make a demonstration in due time.

"RETURN JONATHAN."
Ordeal of the Quaker Name of an "Old Revolutionary."

From the New York Ledger.
The father of Return J. Meigs was born at Middletown, Connecticut. In his youth he loved and addressed a fair Quakeress of Middletown, whose home was very near his own residence, but found much difficulty in obtaining her hand, her objection resulting from her Quakerism. She repeatedly answered his protestations of fidelity and attachment with—

"Nay, Jonathan! I respect thee much, but cannot marry thee; for better a dish of herbs and contempt than a stalled ox and contention therewith."
Mr. Meigs finally wearied with the problem, and paid Ruth what he meant should be his last visit as a lover. He held her hand and blessed her, and having told her that he hoped in time the wound in his heart might be healed in happy alliance with some other family, he spoke his farewell. The kind and yet sorrowful word, spoken with tender softness, and with tearful eyes, fell upon her heart with a power never again to be recalled to his able to ride away, the fair Quakeress, full of love and relenting, looked to him with her hand, at the same time calling out—

"Return, Jonathan! Return, Jonathan!"
To him they were the sweetest words that ever fell upon mortal ears. He returned, and the day was speedily fixed for the celebration of their nuptials. The first child born to them was a son, and the happy father, in commemoration of the blissful words which had hidden him into his early heaven, his baptismal and christened name "Return Jonathan." And the child thus curiously named grew up to an important manhood. Among the officers of the American revolution he was one of the best and bravest, and for his brilliant exploit against the British at Sag Harbor he received the thanks of Congress and a sword. He was a warm friend of President Jefferson, by whom he was appointed Indian agent for the Cherokee, among which people he passed the last of his well spent and useful life.

ALL FOR LOVE.

Ben Butler's Hopeful Nephew's Wife.

New York correspondence of the St. Louis Republic.
Rose Eytzinger, who married the nephew of his uncle, George Butler, and went with that hopeful one to Egypt, is about to return to the stage. What a first-class troupe that man was, and how he lived! He was a man of life around New York for many years, devoting his affections and time to the service of a series of actresses. First Harland, and then Reed, and then Eytzinger. He alternated between the doses of domestic medicine (You could always tell by the attitude of the spoon which was the next dose to take.) He declined to all his lady loves any serious intentions toward Miss Eytzinger. He wrote love letters up to the last minute to one of them, and went off and married Rose. A fine prospect she had for wedded bliss, and very consistent he has carried things out. Rose's flight out of Egypt was unaccompanied by the traditional jacks, and now, after this gay experience of matrimonial felicity, she returns to the stage. Some years ago a pretty, graceful girl, who played with great success, fell madly in love with John C. Heenan, and so John married Sara Stevens. She has led a very interesting, dull life, waiting for that fall son of York to come home. (There was never an hour between 10 a. m. and the midnight next morning, but you could find John on the street.) The frolics of his youth have faded from her face, and her hair is bleached nearly white; her best years have passed unprofitably, and now she goes back on the stage—at least she is making an effort to procure an opening. Miss Stevens was successful in such parts as "Mary Meredith," in the American Com-in and "Bertha," the blind girl, in the Cricket on the Hearth. But her best part was the best dramatic actress Walkley ever had. Mrs. Hoy was his best leading lady for high-toned drawing room lady character, and Madeline Henricus for sweet girlish romance. Her Rose Eytzinger was powerful, and did such a part as the daughter in the dramatized version of Miss Bradton's Outcasts of Society, in a way that neither Mrs. Hoy nor Miss Henricus would dare to attempt. True, that style of part does not repeat itself even in the Walkley repertoire. But Miss Eytzinger added great strength to the company, and will be welcomed back to the scenes with as much enthusiasm as the pyramids and Ben Butler's nephew.

WOODRILL AND CHAFFIN.

A Breeze of Excitement.

A great deal of talk was occasioned about town this evening over the arrest of Woodrill and Chaffin. Proceedings against them were first taken by Mr. A. M. Chaffin, a well known broker, who last night applied for warrants which were accordingly issued, but before they could be executed some one acting in behalf of another libel party as it is said, and, of course, the famous enemy of obscure Hierarchical, had warrants issued against the Messadams by United States Commissioner Osborn. The affidavits in the case were made by Albert Anderson, post-office clerk, A. W. Woolley, of Brooklyn, and T. W. Rees, clerk in the Independent newspaper office, who swore to the sending of the offensive publications through the mails by the accused. Witnesses in the case, Wm. Moody, a negro, and C. D. Miles, who mailed the papers, were sent to the house of detention.

The two were taken to the Commissioner's office in a carriage, thence to jail, until Monday morning, when a hearing will come off. They manifest their usual boldness, and decorated on the way to prison on their outrage, their arrest and confinement on Sunday. They insisted upon suitable apartments at Ludlow Street jail. This afternoon, upon a warrant issued by Mayor Hall, a seizure was made of the establishment of Woodrill & Chaffin, together with the books, furniture and as much of the edition of the publication as was found. The indignation of the community generally has been aroused at the brazenness and audacity shown by the publication complained of, and are presenting parties for the purpose of pursuing the case vigorously.

Mr. Chaffin has also caused the arrest of the so-called Col. Blood, who is charged with being an accomplice; also Denney, the stereotyper, and Smith, printer of the scandalizing paper. The statutory penalty for sending obscene literature through the mails.

THE WONDERS OF NATURE.—The freaks of nature, says the Jackson Daily Whig and Tribune of last Thursday, are indeed wonderful—sometimes startling. Dwarfs, giants, the Siamese twins, etc., are daily subjects of curiosity and comment and of scientific investigation. But we have here at our fair truly the greatest wonders of the age: a cow with two bags, one on her back, and five legs, and a bull that gives milk equal to any cow. They are real curiosities.

Spurgeon and His Church.

A correspondent of the New York World, who has been to hear Spurgeon preach, thus describes his church and the man:

The interior of the tabernacle, which looks from the outside very much like an old fashioned country court house, from an immense oval, with two galleries bounding its sides, the uppermost reaching almost to the roof. These galleries and all the floor space are filled with numbered seats. Of ornament or decoration there is scarcely a shadow. The chapel is a great shell of brick and stone, lined with wood for warmth and comfort. A plain molding runs round the edge of the woodwork, and that is all. The gas burners are twisted into fantastic patterns of decoration, but are simple curved tubes of metal, with a burner and globe at the end.

The platform, which is the pulpit, is furnished with a chair and sofa, and with a small table, which can be pushed easily from place to place over the top of the carpet. Below and in front of this is a long ordinary dining room table, placed on the floor of the building, and covered with a large sheet like cloth, holding a quantity of wine and bread from present view. Mr. Spurgeon is short in stature and in neck, and has a red head. In his face, which is full of life, there is a glow of health, and a gleam of intellect. His features are almost incredibly coarse, and they have grown much coarser since I saw him last, some eight or nine years ago. His brow is perhaps broad, but very low. The lower part of his face is shaded by weak growth of beard. There is absolutely nothing in this face that a painter could lay hold of for a typical picture of one of the spiritual guides of man. There is, perhaps, strength, but not an atom of refinement, or of spirituality, and the strength is that of the bull dog.

MUTILATED CURRENCY.

The Internal Revenue Record officially publishes the following:
"Discounts on account of mutilations now occur only in the case of half notes, for which half of the face of an entire is allowed. If three fifths or more of a note are presented, the full value is allowed; if less than three fifths, but fully half a note, but half the face value is allowed; and if less than a half note, nothing is allowed unless affidavit be furnished for compliance with these rules."
As the old issue of fractional currency have been successfully counterfeited, it is desired to withdraw them from circulation; and they may be forwarded to the Treasurer by express under Circular No. 1, on the same terms as mutilated currency of old issue. There is no provision of law for the redemption of silver three and five cent pieces.

NEVER lean out of the window of a train when in motion. A man named Brown, of Jersey City, violated this rule for a single instant, last Monday afternoon, when the Erie express was crossing the river at West Paterson; and, in the twinkling of an eye, he was jerked out of the window, his brains dashed out, his mutilated body flung to the bottom of the river. His head had come in contact with one of the timbers of the bridge, and the train was going at full speed.

The Corn Crop of the West.

The Western Recordist says:
"The first general frost throughout the Northwest, on the 20th ult., set us adrift as received, found the corn either safely in sheck or out of the way of damage from mauling growth. The frost will assist in drying it out, ready for marketing, and the probabilities now are that the present corn crop of the West will be the greatest one ever gathered. Indeed it has been estimated to aggregate 1,000,000 bushels, which, if added to the surplus left over from the preceding two immense crops, will make an amount of corn probably greater than we shall see for many years to come."
The present abundance of such a vast store of grain with the low prices that will naturally follow, is that much will be wasted; but, if securely cribbed and carefully saved, it may yet be counted a mine of wealth to those farmers whose means will allow them to save it.

He Couldn't Drink Wine.

From Pat Contributor's Saturday Night.
That was a noble youth who, on being urged to take wine at the table of a famous statesman in Washington, had the moral courage to refuse. He was a poor young man, just beginning the struggle of life. He brought letters to the great statesman, who kindly invited him home to dinner.

"Not take a glass of wine?" said the great statesman, in wonderment and surprise.

"Not one simple glass of wine?" echoed the statesman's beautiful and fascinating wife, as she arose, glass in hand, and with a glance that would have charmed the anachorite, endeavored to press it upon him.

"No," said the heroic youth, resolutely, gently repelling the proffered glass.

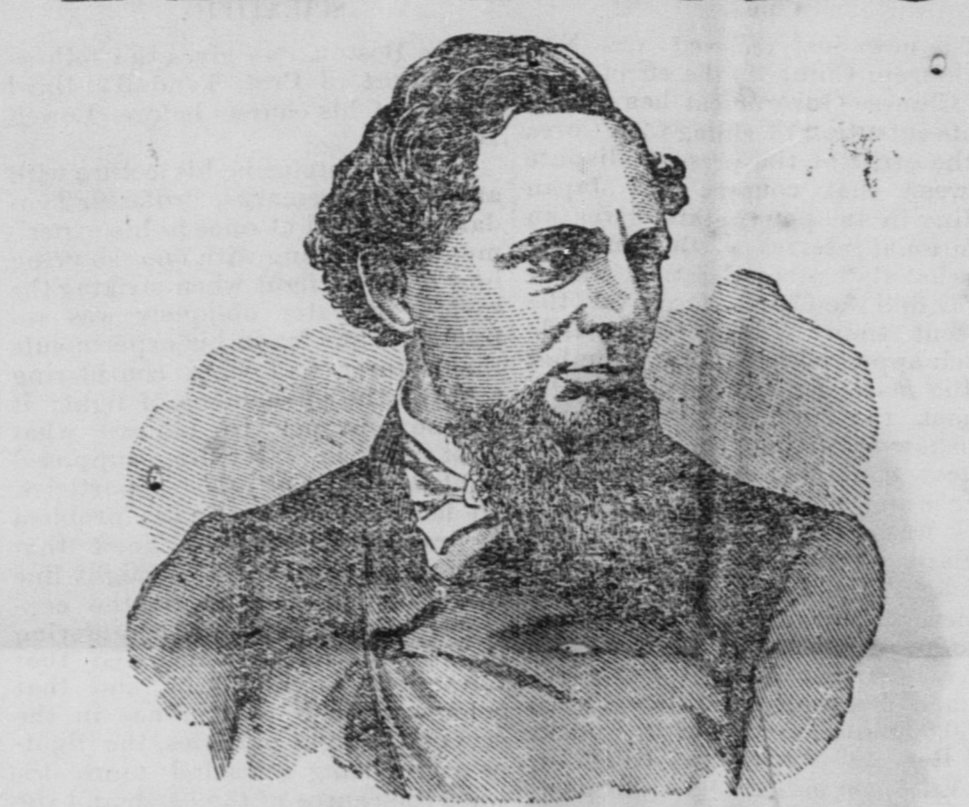

What a picture of moral grandeur was that! A poor, friendless youth, refusing wine at a table of a wealthy and famous statesman, even though proffered by the fair hands of a beautiful lady.

So, said the noble young man, and he refused to take a little and be checked. "I never drink wine, but here he straightened himself up, and his words grew firmer; 'I refuse to take a little and be checked. I don't mind trying to suffer!'"

Gen. Grant denies that he intends to adopt a different and decisive policy toward the Indians. If any differ, he says, he intends henceforth to behave humane to them, than heretofore; which simply means, that no matter how treacherous and bloodthirsty the savages may continue to become, no measures of prevention or relation are to be adopted by the present Administration to save our frontier people from robbery and massacre.

CHAS. A. HOLCOMBE'S COLUMN

DR. JOHN BULL'S
Great Remedies.
DR. JOHN BULL'S
Concentrated Extract of BUCHU
COMBINED WITH Bromide of Potassium.

Purchase a bottle and carefully read directions.

BUCHU is a stimulant, and of itself has many virtues. It is a powerful tonic, when scientifically combined with Bromide of Potassium and other ingredients, produces a salutary effect, and causes a healthy action, thus increasing the power of digestion, allaying irritation, reducing all morbid action, relieving the pain and inflammation and causing the repair and nutriment in the human body to be more abundant, thus preventing decomposition and decay, and giving nourishment, health and vigor to the system.

My Buchu is good for all diseases arising from excess, such as Weakness, Indigestion, the Back and Stomach, Trembling in the region of the Heart, Weak Nerves, Pallid Countenance, Dryness of the Skin, Scalding, Scrophulous, in its many forms, Ulcers, and Tumors.

If your system is affected by any of the above symptoms, a full course of Buchu, with a bottle of my Buchu, will cure you. Buchu is a powerful tonic, and you may rely on being cured.

I know just what I say. My record as a Compounder of Medicine is second to no man in the South.

Twenty-five or thirty years ago, as my fellow-citizens know full well, found no help in the prescription of medicine in the cure of various diseases than all the physicians in Louisville put together. I was a doctor, and for every case I had a hundred. I am no upstart of yesterday. My medicine is a success—a great success. Louisville is not large enough for me to have a competitor. I monopolize the Wholesale Potent Medicine trade here, and another has tried, by copying after me here in Louisville, to compete with me, but our customers have been silenced, and their efforts have been abortive.

My medicines are good and answer the purpose—that is the secret of my success. My reputation as a compounder of good, reliable medicines is well established. I believe my Buchu and Bromide of Potassium is the best article now in the market for the cure of all diseases of the urinary or genito-urinary organs, such as Neuritis, Gonorrhea, Irritability of the Bladder and Uterus, Indigestion, the Pelvic of the Kidney, and all this class of diseases.

Buy a dollar bottle and be cured. Use as per directions in all cases.
